Vintage technology center provides comfortable setting for brushing up on your computer skills

Looking to brush up on your computer skills or learn something new related to technology? The Vintage Center for Active Adults, located in East Liberty, can help you meet this goal while also providing opportunities to socialize with other older adults in a comfortable setting.

Vintage provides an ongoing Senior Tech Support program with volunteer tech coaches in its new Ann Truxell Technology Center, which was created with funding provided by the Pennsylvania Department of Aging. Offerings include:

- Computer classes specifically designed for older adults in beginner, intermediate and advanced ranges)
- Individual coaching sessions to build technology skills
- A lending library for computer equipment (laptops) and hot spots (internet access)
- Option-to-purchase equipment and hot spots, with fees based on income

In addition to the tech support classes, Vintage has a variety of other programs and services, including exercise classes, routine health screenings, nutritious lunch programs and information on aging services.

Vintage (a service of familylinks) is located at 421 N. Highland Avenue in East Liberty. To learn more, call (412) 361-5003 or visit VintagePittsburgh.org.
